

Casual Field Studies Guide

Imagine a job where your workplace is the beach, rainforest or rock platform and your role involves catching sea creatures, leading bushwalks and identifying bugs. We are seeking field study guides who love to share their knowledge and passion for the environment with the younger generation.

Join a team where you know your contribution will really make a difference to the Earth's future. Personalised training in octopus handling provided!

About us

AUSECO is a small business based in Elanora Heights that delivers school excursions at a variety of locations across Sydney. Our outdoor field studies meet the field work requirements of the NSW syllabus for geography and science. Our team is made up of biologists, environmental scientists, geographers and teachers with a range of backgrounds, and we're looking to grow!

About you

We are looking for field studies guides who can deliver our excursion programs in an informative and engaging manner to students of all ages.

- Tertiary education in environmental science, biology, geography, or secondary education (specialising in these topics).
- Own transport and willingness to travel to various sites.
- Experience with delivering programs to students in an outdoor context.
- Punctual, reliable, and adaptable with a commitment to ensuring a high standard of delivery.
- The position also requires a certain degree of physical activity and a passion for sharing your knowledge about the natural world.

About the role

Our field studies guides manage and deliver the complete excursion experience to our schools. This includes setting up equipment, delivering the program and liaising with teachers.

- Locations: Sydney's northern beaches, CBD and Sutherland Shire – sites include beaches, bushland, wetlands, rock platforms and rainforests.
- Hours: 8-9 am start and 2-3 pm finish.
- Frequency of work: Up to 3 days a week during school terms only.
- Required: Working with Children Check and First Aid certificate.
- Remuneration: Dependant on experience.
